Message from our Pastor:

Happy 4th of July!!! This Tuesday is the day our country declared its independence. It is a day we celebrate here in the United States. Do they celebrate the 4th of July in Great Britain? I would suspect no. Actually, definitely not. Our great day of rejoicing was not theirs.

But it brings up an interesting point.

Isn't it amazing how quickly nations that were once mortal enemies can, within a relatively short period of time, become the best of friends?

Great Britain is a friend to the United States. While a couple hundred years ago we were enemies.

Look at Germany. It was only a little over a half-century that we were at war with them, and now they are considered allies. In fact, both of those countries recently fought along-side American troops in recent wars and fighting in the Middle East. How quickly things can change.

Will we in 50 years be an ally of North Korea? Seems hard to believe but history would seem to say it is very possible.

The big thing that has to happen first before two countries can become friends (and it is basically the same with individual people as well) is that those two have to come to have the same or very similar beliefs...the same outlook on how the world should be...desire the same goals to come about. Mutual goals and benefits from trade brought Great Britain and the US into a friendship. German's embrace of democracy brought them and the US into a friendship.

While these secular ideals have some binding force and to the extent they create peace and unity among people and nations they are a wonderful thing, they are all ultimately only a dim intimation of the one and only force God has given to mankind that has the potential to bring about one human family. That force is the Christian religion.

The same God who created ever single human from China to North Korea to India to Alaska is the same God who promised that unity across peoples and nations is possible, but said that it could only happen in one place, with the embrace of only one way of life by all those peoples. When laws of nations reflect the principles of Christianity, true peace that lasts is possible between nations.

That is why the work of the Church, of Christians is so direly important. Too often people want leaders and diplomats to negotiate peace, but that does not usually change the hearts of people who are represented by those leaders. But when the hearts of the people are changed first, they then can select people to represent them and bring about their (hopefully) godly vision for the future.

Peace in the world among people and cultures is not achieved through negotiations about who gets what stuff, at least not lasting peace. It is achieved through an embrace of truth; the truth God has laid out for humanity to embrace. That truth is found in the Christian religion. It is shared with the world through the Church. Have a great 4th. Thanks be to God for the work he does in the world toward creating unity and peace.
